Women fall to Creighton

Falcons exit early from NCAA tournament with 84-73 loss

by Mark Leonard DeChant
sports editor

Their season is unexpectedly, and unceremoniously, over.

The women's basketball team exited the NCAA tournament in the first round Wednesday, losing 84-73 to Creighton in front of an Anderson Arena crowd of 3,772.

The Falcons, ranked 24th in the nation, ended their winning streak at 20 and their season with a record of 26-4. It was the first home loss for BG in 13 games this year.

BG held a 62-60 lead with 4:04 left in the game, but Creighton (24-6) used three-pointers and foul shots to outscore the Falcons 24-11 the rest of the way.

Creighton coach Connie Yori said her team kept itself together at the end.

"When it looked like things were going bad for us, we got ourselves composed and we hung on," she said, "We could have folded and we could have gone home back to Omaha. I give our kids a lot of credit for remaining poised."

Poise helped the Falcons turn the tide of the game in the second half.

BG has trailed at halftime only three times at home this season, and won all three games. With Creighton leading 39-30 at intermission, BG had history on its side but the Lady Jays definitely had the momentum.

Michelle Shade hit consecutive jumpers to bring the Falcons to 39-35, but Creighton spurted over the next four minutes to open up a 13-point gap at 51-38.

BG coach Jaci Clark called a timeout, watching her team's tournament hopes slip away.

Sporting a new defense and renewed enthusiasm, the Falcons went on an 18-2 tear. Talita Scott's layup gave BG a 56-53 lead -- their largest of the game -- but Creighton forward Missy Miller buried BG with three shots measuring 20 feet apiece.

Miller nailed a three-pointer at the 4:37 mark to pull her team ahead by two, then

Gender equity issue concerns advancement

by Katie Simmons
News staff writer

Very little has been said concerning gender equity at the University since the report of the Faculty Senate Ad Hoc Committee on Gender Equity was made at a previous meeting.

However, the Senate Executive Committee will meet to discuss the issue directly Thursday.

The SEC will listen to a proposal dealing with the formation of a Committee on Faculty Equity at a meeting concerned with the advancement of gender equity at the University.

The senate has already approved the idea of a gender equity committee. The next step is for the SEC to approve the proposed committee.

"Several people on the SEC served on the Ad Hoc committee so that should help," said Veronica Gold, Faculty Senate Secretary and member of the Ad Hoc Committee. "It is very difficult to say whether [the SEC] will approve of the committee or not, whether they will forward the motion with or without endorsement."

The Committee on Faculty Equity's (CFE) proposal states the committee will consist of eight members who will serve a term of three years. The committee members will include five elected faculty members, three must be faculty senators, who will balance both the male and female representation.

The CFE, if approved, will be responsible for the collecting and reporting of data on or concerning gender equity and the professional and economic status of faculty to the Faculty Senate members.

The committee will also prepare and distribute an annual report on the status of gender equity including the economic and professional level of faculty to the University community, administration and the Board of Trustees.

Even if the SEC approves the proposal, the committee is far from being formed.

Gender Equity Committee Proposal

- ✓ The committee would consist of eight members who would serve for three years.
- ✓ It would be responsible for the collecting and reporting of data concerning gender equity.
- ✓ It would prepare and distribute an annual report on the status of gender equity.

"The proposal then goes back to the Senate for consideration," Gold said. "If that passes, 15 days must pass before it can go to the Board of Trustees."

The next meeting of the Board of Trustees will be in early May. Therefore, the earliest the committee could be formed is May or June.

Chairman declares hearings necessary

by Larry Margasak
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- Rep. Dan Rostenkowski became the second prominent House committee chairman to declare White-water hearings may be necessary, but Speaker Thomas S. Foley refused to budge from his opposition Wednesday.

"I think the congressional hearings are going to be inevitable," the House Ways and Means chairman said, even though "the American people are tired of all this."

The latest crack in Democratic solidarity against hearings had no effect on Foley. He told reporters that Congress should "accede to the request of the special counsel to postpone any hearings until he has completed his investigation."

Foley even warned lawmakers to be careful about holding hearings on White House interference in the case -- even though special counsel Robert B. Fiske Jr. said he wouldn't object to such an inquiry when he finishes that phase in several weeks.

Foley said that Fiske expressed concern that hearings "directed toward the White House meetings," with regulators could become "a method of backing into the fundamental questions involved in Whitewater issues in Arkansas."

Tuesday, Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., said hearings might be the best way to get the facts out "quickly and completely."

Known for his bipartisanship, Hamilton is chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and was co-chairman of the House-Senate Iran-Contra Committee.

Foley said Democratic lawmakers "are free to say what they think," about the need for hearings into the president's Whitewater real estate investment; its relationship to a failed savings and loan; the death of a White House lawyer and any possible administration interference in the case.

Asked whether Whitewater was affecting the congressional agenda, Foley said, "I don't think it is yet, but it could."

Rostenkowski, fresh from a renomination victory in Tuesday's Illinois primary, would not

GM workers could end strike

Management, union reach tentative agreement to return to work

by James Hannah
The Associated Press

DAYTON -- Union and General Motors Corp. negotiators reached a tentative agreement that could end a three-day strike at two area brake-making plants Wednesday.

The strike, by 3,000 workers at the GM Delco Chassis Division plants, forced the suspension of production at GM assembly plants in Michigan, Indiana and Wisconsin.

GM spokesman Charles Kronbach said the agreement was reached after an eight-hour bargaining session Wednesday. He would not disclose what was in the agreement.

Kronbach said that if the union ratifies the agreement, workers at the GM Delco Chassis Division plants could be back at work by Thursday afternoon.

United Auto Workers Local 696 was scheduled to vote on the agreement Thursday morning.

"Delco Chassis is pleased that the parties were able to reach a tentative local agreement, which lays the groundwork to improve Delco's standing in the marketplace," plant managers Sam Shalaby and Dan Warrell said in a statement. "Although production was disrupted, impact on our customers should be minimal."

Local 696 President Joe Hasenjager confirmed in a union statement that an agreement had been reached. Details were not included in the statement.

"It has been a hard and long negotiation, but I am excited with the results," said Joe Buckley, shop chairman. "We have achieved greater job security now and in the future."

Hasenjager has said issues separating the two sides include job security and subcontracting.

The union had sought a company promise to build a new generation of brake parts in Dayton. But GM had proposed to hire an Australian company to make an aluminum part that would replace a cast iron part made in Dayton, union officials said.

They said the loss of the part eventually would eliminate hundreds of jobs at the plant. The union also wanted a GM commitment to maintain engine-bearing production in Dayton, which would preserve jobs.

The strike began Monday after negotiators failed to agree on a new three-year contract by a union-imposed deadline.

In a statement released from Detroit, GM said production was halted at assembly plants in Fort Wayne, Ind., Lansing, Mich., and Janesville, Wis.

Gerry King, spokesman for the GM's North American Truck Platforms' plant in Fort Wayne, said first-shift workers were sent home when the brake parts ran out. The second shift was told not to report, he said.

Opponents should ignore KKK rally

By now, just about everyone in Bowling Green knows the Ku Klux Klan are planning to don their sheets and cones and occupy the steps of the Wood County Courthouse June 18. According to County Commissioner Robert Latta, the biggest problems the county faces regarding the upcoming Klan rally are the costs incurred for police protection. When the Klan shows up, so do the multitudes who disagree with the Klan's philosophies and/or long track record of violence. Extra officers have to be paid to keep the peace.

People are already planning on showing up in droves to protest the Klan's presence in Bowling Green. This is not an unusual occurrence for a Klan rally. Historically, their rallies have been met with strong opposition, and, at times, violence has ensued.

One must only look to recent counterprotest plans, namely last month's effort to get University students to attend a counter-rally in Coshocton, to realize the possibility for violent confrontation.

"If we make an error, it will be on the side of being overly protective and not being short-handed," Mike Blair, operating assistant for the Wood County sheriff's office, told The News.

The News believes the Klan's actions, past and present, speak for themselves. To stand on an editorial soapbox and preach opposition to a group that is genuinely abhorred by a large majority of the general population would be to take a step, but not necessarily a step in any direction.

In this case, The News believes the best protest against the upcoming rally would be a silent one. The Ku Klux Klan expects and thrives on confrontation.

For those who plan on attending the rally as a counterprotest to the Klan, we suggest not showing up at all. If nobody is present to rally against the Klan, the Klan's mission in Bowling Green on June 18 will have failed.

It is always easiest to jump on the bandwagon and act expediently. The News suggests thinking before acting in this case.

It would be in the best interest of all who oppose what the Ku Klux Klan stands for to make their visit a failure.

Class duties could be better

I approached the teacher after class and said I was having trouble understanding the material. I found the concept he had just explained difficult to grasp. I wondered if he could further explain its meaning.

He continued to erase the blackboard as he told me the concept was fairly simple and straightforward and that I should read the book. When I assured him I had gone over the assigned material, he repeated his suggestion to read the book, this time adding the word carefully. He never stopped erasing.

In another class that same semester, the professor stopped lecturing and fixed an icy stare upon two students seated high in the cavernous classroom. They were jabbering loudly again, engaging in frivolous conversation like they did each time the class was in session. They were so oblivious to everyone else they hadn't realized all eyes now were upon them. A classmate seated nearby had to get up, walk over to them and point out they were the center of disruption and attention.

These are not isolated instances. Another of my previous classes featured a professor who continually digressed from the course material, often for minutes at a time. To this day, I can relate where he spent his vacations and how he feels about many of Washington's seasoned pundits.

Currently, there is a student who sits ringside in a class but probably never hears a single lecture. He usually is too busy reading The News during each session to pay attention or take notes. When he finally puts down the newspaper, he acts noticeably bored. On more than one occasion, he has simply gotten up and walked out.

Friends have related similar classroom experiences to me. It seems there is no shortage on this campus of teachers and students who, to various degrees, are shirking their respective duties. Both groups share in the guilt of violating classroom etiquette and wasting valuable time.

It's no secret some classes can induce serious bouts of student narcolepsy. Of course, most course material can hit dry patches that would prove unbearably boring even if the instructor presented it while swinging naked from a vine.

And one can imagine that even the University's finest faculty members become burned-out teaching the same material semester after semester. Inventing creative teaching methods to keep lessons fresh and interesting probably becomes less of an enthusiastic challenge with time.

Challenging all the old rules

When I was 18 years old, I arrived at Earlham College, a small, Quaker private school in Richmond, Ind., filled with fascination and expectations. It was the fall of 1968, in the middle of a controversial presidential campaign, a three-way contest between Republican Richard M. Nixon, Democrat Hubert Humphrey and racial segregationist George Wallace. The disturbing events of that year -- the "Tet Offensive" by the North Vietnamese which destroyed the myth of American military supremacy in southeast Asia, the tragic assassinations of Martin Luther King Jr. and Robert Kennedy, the police riot against demonstrators at the Democratic Party's national convention in Chicago that summer and the growing worldwide tide of political and moral opposition to the U.S. war in Vietnam -- all formed the turbulent cultural and social background to our times.

My generation of students had experienced a political lifetime in the short span of several years. We had been inspired by the patriotism and idealism of John F. Kennedy. We stood in the hot summer sun before the Lincoln Memorial, and were moved to tears as we listened to Martin's magnificent "I Have a Dream" speech. We marched in solidarity with our sisters and brothers who stood against racial injustice and segregation in Birmingham, Montgomery and Jackson, and we cheered as the authoritarian system of Jim Crow collapsed.

My college experience at Earlham was just another phase of that process of cultural change and self-discovery. The pace of change was occurring so rapidly by this time that the rules, regulations and values generated by the early '60s now seemed, at the end of the decade, hopelessly anachronistic and backward to us. For example, upperclass students forced us to accept "freshman beanies," small, round, colorful little caps which symbolized one's school spirit. The African-American students were probably the first to raise objections, on practical grounds. Freshman beanies were designed for white boys with crew cuts, not sisters and brothers with bushy afros. So when we discarded our beanies as "obnoxious symbols of the white man's power structure," our long-haired,

However, that's no excuse for displaying continuous behavior that discourages the learning process. This includes teachers who no longer have the energy or patience to provide their students with extra help or interesting lectures. It also includes disinterested students who attend class only out of duty to consider the classroom to be their personal playground.

Tuition costs are too great for serious students to tolerate either group. In fact, it's not overstating the matter to suggest the quality of education is threatened by them.

Teachers, remember who you are serving, and why. Whether whomever pays their tuition.

I have nothing against occasional distractions in the classroom. I find them necessary and beneficial. Everyone appreciates a funny teacher or student who relieves the doldrums of a particularly monotonous session. They give all in attendance the chance to wake up and shake off the cobwebs.

I also can understand a faculty member who refrains from helping a student to encourage independent thinking and problem-solving.

And I'm not suggesting I've never talked in class. Like everyone, I've made sporadic comments to those around me, but always briefly and in a low tone.

I'm not talking about those with good intentions. I'm discussing University educators who, somewhere along their daily teaching grind, have become too comfortable or lax in their duties to be effective. I'm also referring to inconsiderate students who your students realize it or not, the style in which you present your lectures affects their capacity to learn. So does your willingness to remain accessible. They can perceive a tired or complacent attitude better than you may suspect.

Students, remember why you're here, too. It's a privilege to walk these hallowed halls, not an obligation. If you're going to share a classroom with others who want to be here, develop a studious mindset or get out.

Loud or distracting behavior in the classroom shows a contemptuous disregard for fellow classmates and the instructor. It's also an annoying display of immaturity at its worst.

When those here to teach become too settled within their positions, and those here to learn refuse to settle at all, the rest of us can find education a difficult and tedious process.

David Coehrs is a weekly columnist for The BG News.

ties. Again and again, young people led the way: the idealistic college students who joined the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, to take part in the "sit-in" demonstrations across the South; the black inner-city youths who created the militant Black Panther Party; the white middle-class young people who defied their parents by joining the anti-war movement. We must revive that sense of urgency and political imagination for our own time, if we intend to dismantle the attitudes and institutions which continue to divide humanity by race, gender, class and sexual orientation. Young people must be given the opportunity to establish their own organizations for protest and community-activism, guided by their own ideas, values and goals.

We must inspire and motivate a new generation of youth leadership and activism for our own time. As in the '60s young people must not hesitate to "be realistic," by demanding "the impossible." Because only then will "the impossible," become reality.

Clovers for sale
APOPKA, Fla. -- The luck of the Irish is now available to anyone with a phone or a $10 bill.
Just in time for St. Patrick's Day, businessman John Piergross is shipping thousands of live four-leaf clovers all over the country from an Apopka nursery.
Piergross owns the exclusive rights to grow and market a strain of clover that grows with four leaflets every time. The strain was developed at the University of Florida by plant breeders David Wofford and David Baltensperger.
The clover all come from one perfect specimen. Using a microscope, scientists remove a tiny portion of the plant shoot, then place it into a solution of growth hormones and nutrients to produce several shoots. The process is repeated many times, so one tiny shoot eventually produces an unlimited number of identical offspring.
Piergross said Tuesday he obtained the rights to the clover before last year's St. Patrick's Day, but was growing plants in a rented greenhouse and had no experience, industry or market contacts -- and no customers.
Then he entered a partnership with John and Bob Scott, who operate the John's Inc. nursery. The nursery oversees the growing process and pots and ships the plants to meet orders generated through a toll free number: 1-800-BIG-LUCK.
"We ship them for birthdays, weddings, anniversaries, parties, special occasions of all types," Piergross said.
Piergross and the Scotts believe profits will bloom as more people discover the plants are available all year long. They wouldn't say how much money they've made so far, only that their future lies in developing year-round sales.
For Thursday's St. Patrick's Day celebrations, the trio has shipped about 30,000 of the 3-inch pots to distribution centers in Florida and the Southeast for Kmart department stores and Publix and Winn-Dixie supermarkets.
The stores sell the pots for $10 each, using their own special packaging and promotion.

"It's frustrating, but when there's a light at the end of the tunnel, there's hope," said Craig Hammerman, whose Brooklyn office is around the corner from a dead hydrant that steals one-third of the block's spaces.
The hydrants, which date to the turn of the century, became obsolete in the early 1970s when the Fire Department switched from a high- to a low-pressure water system.
But the unused hulks were left in place, and would-be parkers were left with two choices: Keep looking, or risk a ticket.
No longer. It's goodbye hydrants, hello spaces.
"Undoubtedly, this should mean more parking spaces," said Dwight Langham, spokesman for the city Department of Transportation. "How many more is unknown."
Why's that? Well, the new spaces are subject to existing restrictions in the area. They could be metered spaces, or night-only spaces, or not spaces at all.
Nearly 5,000 hydrants are involved. Some will be refitted and reused, but most of the plugs will be pulled. The total cost: $1.5 million (not including unwritten parking tickets).

Element named
SAN DIEGO -- The 106th element in the periodic table has been named "seaborgium" in honor of Nobel laureate Glenn T. Seaborg, a University of California chemistry professor.

Seaborg is the co-discoverer of plutonium and nine other transuranium elements, which come after uranium on the periodic table and are artificially created in particle accelerators.

The announcement of the name seaborgium, identified by the chemical symbol Sg, came from the element's co-discoverer, Kenneth Hulet, a retired chemist from the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory. Hulet made the announcement Sunday at an American Chemical Society annual meeting.

Seaborg is associate director-at-large for the Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory. For discovering plutonium, Seaborg shared the 1951 Nobel prize for chemistry with former LBL director Edwin MacMillan.

Seaborg was chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, now the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, from 1961 to 1971.

Seaborgium's discovery was confirmed last summer.

"I really believe that the American people are tired of all this, and that's one of the reasons why I got such a majority," he said. "They want us to govern."
The subject of hearings didn't come up as President Clinton held a White House news conference Wednesday, but the president was asked if he stood by a 1992 assertion that he and his wife lost nearly $70,000 on the Whitewater deal. "I don't have anything else to say about that right now," Clinton said. "We are cooperating fully right now with the special counsel. I wish you would let them do their work."
Democratic members of the Senate Budget Committee left a White House meeting with Clinton urging Republicans to hold off hearings. "We ought to be talking about job creation. We ought to be talking about health care reform and a whole host of other issues rather than running down this rabbit track called Whitewater," Sen. Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., said.
Sen. Donald Riegle, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, said Congress should heed the plea of the special counsel.

Divorce affects town
BLUFFTON, Ohio -- A woman going through a divorce from the mayor's son has sued the police chief and the village of Bluffton, claiming they took her baby and ordered her to leave town.
One officer accused in the lawsuit said Wednesday the baby was not taken. He declined to comment further.
Holly Edwards claimed in a lawsuit filed March 1 in U.S. District Court in Toledo that Police Chief Reid Foust and Officer Rick Skilliter removed her son, then 8 months old, from her home Jan. 12 ordered her to leave Bluffton, about 60 miles south of Toledo.
She alleged the officers showed her papers they said gave custody of the child to the boy's father, William Edwards. The officers then told Mrs. Edwards to get in her car and leave Bluffton "and never return," the lawsuit said.
Her lawyer, Lafe Tolliver, said no court order was issued.
Mrs. Edwards said in the lawsuit her son was returned to her the next day. She voluntarily moved to Canton, Mich., on Jan. 14.

STRIKE
King said 2,100 of the plant's 2,600 workers were affected by the stoppage. The plant assembles full-sized Chevrolet and GMC pickup trucks.
Ray Deibel, spokesman for the Lansing Automotive Division's body and chassis assembly plants, said operations there were suspended late Tuesday night. He said the second shift was sent home and the first shift told not to report.
Deibel said the stoppage affects about 5,000 of the plants' 6,500 workers. The two plants produce the Oldsmobile Achieva, Pontiac Grand Am and Buick Skylark.
Employees at GM's truck assembly plant in Janesville were sent home at the end of the first shift. About 800 workers who assemble medium-duty trucks were affected, said company spokesman Jeff Kuhlman.
The strike also threatened production at other GM assembly plants that depend on the brake systems and parts supplied by the Delco Chassis plants.
Saturn's car assembly line in Spring Hill, Tenn., has only enough brake parts to continue production through Thursday's day shift, said Saturn spokeswoman Candy Best.
If production comes to a halt, she said, the plant's 8,500 employees will come to work but spend time on team development and problem resolution.

ACROSS THE STATE

The lawsuit seeks $800,000 in damages and an apology from the village, to be published in four consecutive issues of a local newspaper.
Foust and Mayor Roger Edwards declined to comment.
Williams Edwards, who filed for divorce Jan. 7, was not named in the lawsuit. He could not be reached to comment Wednesday.
There is no telephone listing for him in Bluffton.
Skilliter said, "You're making the assumption that we took the baby. We didn't."

Ecologist covers global research

by Robin Coe
News staff writer

A plant ecologist from the University of Michigan lectured on the effects of global change on the Great Lakes region Wednesday.

James Teeri, director of the University of Michigan Biological Station and University of Michigan Global Change project, explained global change research and the effects of change on eco-systems.

Teeri focused on the influence global change has on plant communities and also explained other aspects of the research.

Helen Michaels, an assistant professor of biological sciences, said the department of biological sciences invited Teeri to lecture at the University because of the importance of global warming in the region.

"Global change is something at this point in time that is unpredictable," Michaels said.

Carbon dioxide levels have increased over the years, she said. Increased levels of carbon dioxide may affect plant photosynthesis in plants and animal communities.

"We don't know what effects of that will be in the future," she said. She said research is being done in the Great Lakes to study the effects of global change.

Carbon dioxide is released into the atmosphere when fossil fuels are burned. Fossil fuels are used in many aspects of daily life, Michaels said.

"Every aspect of our mechanical lives is the reason why this has been occurring," she said. "Everytime we flick a switch we're involved in global change."

Toledo library hosts star-studded auction

by Genell Pavelich
News contributing writer

Kevin Costner, Cindy Crawford and Arnold Schwarzenegger may not be in Northwest Ohio this weekend but their John Hancock will.

The Locke Branch Library, 806 Main St. in Toledo, will have a celebrity memorabilia auction Sunday to raise money to provide services for juveniles and young adults in the Toledo area.

The auction, conducted by local auctioneer Jack Cousino, will include more than 300 items signed by celebrities and political figures, according to Anne Kier, supervisor of the library.

The items being auctioned were donated by various television, movie and sports stars as well as authors, musicians and political leaders.

"I sent letters to the different celebrities explaining the problem," Kier said. "I just hoped for a good response."

Some of the items include autographed photos of Phil Collins, Kevin Costner, Cindy Crawford, Signed scripts from shows such as "Home Improvement," and "Guiding Light," will also be auctioned as well as an autographed poster and book from Stephen King.

Other items being auctioned include clothing, compact discs and tapes - all signed by the celebrities.

Kier said the Locke Branch Friends of the Library chose to have an auction to help fund the extra equipment needed at the facility.

The library is in a low income part of Toledo and the staff has been struggling to provide services for the local youth who are patrons to the library, she said.

The fundraiser is needed because with the current funding, these services cannot be provided, she added.

Kier said the staff is hoping that the unusual fundraiser will bring a lot of people and support.

"We're hoping for a good response. The Toledo Library has never tried something like this before," Kier said. "We'll find out how it works."

The sale begins at the library at 1 p.m. with a preview at noon. For more information on the auction contact Kier at (419)259-5310.

WFAL Station of Year finalist

by Aaron Eppie
News contributing writer

The University's AM station has hit the big time.

WFAL, the student-run station broadcast out of West Hall, was selected as a finalist in the annual contest sponsored by the National Association for College Broadcasters. The category was Interim College Station of the Year.

Tom Bunyard, executive director of WFAL, said they were judged on professionalism, how well they fit with other stations and community service.

"We definitely do a lot for the community," he said.

One of the events the station has done is the "Grab Your Balls," charity golf tournament.

The staff also hosts fundraisers to improve the station.

Promotions director George Privateer's 24-hour marathon last month raised nearly $1,000 for new transmitters, which allowed more people to pick up the station's signal.

To enter the annual contest, the WFAL staff had to compile a demo tape mixing clips of various shows and musical formats.

They also had to write a 20 to 30 page report outlining their day-to-day activities and their goals for the future, Bunyard said.

The demo tape included shows such as "The Meet Market," and "Past Trax."

Bunyard said the uniqueness of the station played a part in their selection as a finalist.

"It's fairly rare to have a commercial station. We're entirely self-sufficient," he said. "We run like it's a real station. We pay our employees, we have commissions, we hire and fire."

Tom Han, operations manager and next year's general manager, said WFAL benefits the students as well by giving them sales experience.

Student broadcasters talk to potential clients who may want to buy advertising space on the air, Han said.

"If they can sell air time, they can sell anything just because here they're selling something intangible," he said.

Although the station only entered in one category this year, Bunyard said they will be applying for more next year.

"We feel really confident," he said.

Other categories include best on-air personality, best news show and best sports coverage.

Commission to plant tree

by John Gibney
staff writer

The Tree Commission of Bowling Green will plant a tree in the Oak Grove Cemetery on April 22 in celebration of Arbor Day and Earth day.

Fifth graders from St. Aloysius and Ridge Elementary schools will participate, with each student receiving a seed for his or her own evergreen tree.

Ted Groat, chairman for the commission, said the members like teaching young students about the importance of trees, and the children are usually excited in learning.

"It is typically an opportunity to remind people to plant trees and how they beautify the community," Groat said.

The tree commission focuses its attention on trees in public property areas, such as parks and schools. Its goals include taking care of trees, keeping them beautiful and encouraging residents to plant trees of their own, Groat said.

A city recognized with effectively managing their tree resources receives an award honoring the community as Tree City USA. This award, established by the Ohio Department of Natural Resources, has been given to Bowling Green every year since 1980.

Members from the Tree Commission, along with Mayor Wes Hoffman, will attend the awards program for Tree City USA on April 27 in Port Clinton.

Kits to explain actions of heart

by Richard Leva
News staff writer

The American Heart Association is helping to educate children about nutrition, health and heart disease prevention with free educational kits distributed to local public schools.

The organization has provided the health kits to Wood County schools to educate children about the functions of the cardiovascular system and how to prevent heart attacks and other related diseases.

Schools are the most effective place to educate children about preventing heart disease, according to the AHA. So far the health kits have been used to teach more than 1,000 students in Wood County alone.

One school that uses the health kits in its school curriculum is the Montessori School of Bowling Green. Kits like "Heart Treasure Chest," and "Getting to Know Your Heart," use videotapes, models and in-class exercises to teach children functions of the heart.

"We help children find their pulse and calculate how many times a minute that is," said Marie Pendleton, director of education at Montessori. "Then we run in place for a minute and count it again and talk about how the heart sends up the blood through the body which sends oxygen throughout the system."

The programs also teach children to have high self-esteem and positive attitudes. These traits will help children sustain a healthier lifestyle, said Kathleen McLaughlin, health educator of the Environmental Department of the Wood County Health Department.

"A positive attitude means you're willing to change some behaviors, like from eating high-fat foods to eating healthier snack foods," McLaughlin said. "And positive self-esteem motivates you to maintain some healthy habits that may be a little hard to keep."

Another program, "Smoke-Free Class of 2000," sponsored by the American Lung Association, American Cancer Society and the American Heart Association, is expected to produce a smoke-free class by the year 2000.

House bill will open doors for minorities

by Carolyn Plone
The Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS -- A state representative was apologetic as he spoke in favor of a bill that would force athletic and social clubs to open their doors to women and minorities all the time Wednesday.

"I suppose there's some questioning, 'What's this white, Anglo-Saxon Protestant Republican doing co-sponsoring a bill like this?'" said Rep. Tim Greenwood, R-Sylvania.

The House approved the bill by an 81-16 margin. It now goes to the Senate.

Greenwood said he began supporting the bill after his 7-year-old daughter asked why their country club had a steam room for men but not for women.

"There is no rational way for explaining that," he said.

He and Rep. Vernon Sykes, D-Akron, who sponsored the bill, said it would keep women and minorities from missing out on professional networking at the clubs -- which sometimes are referred to in women's circles as "old white boys' clubs."

"This will help prevent discrimination of women and minorities at large, quasi-public clubs which were established for business purposes as much as for social or recreational purposes," Greenwood said.

The bill allows the Ohio Civil Rights Commission to award damages, including certain punitive damages and attorney fees, to a person who is discriminated against at a social or recreational club. Revoking a club's liquor license could be part of the punitive damages.

Current law allows only compensatory damages for discrimination from a public place.

Rep. Richard Hodges, R-Metamora, said he thought the penalties were too harsh for the offenses.

He offered an amendment that would have taken away the award of punitive damages, which are awarded to punish the offender as well as compensate the victim. The amendment failed.

Rep. Otto Beatty, D-Columbus, said he favored the bill, but added that only people who could afford the steep price of club memberships would gain from it.

Sykes said a growing number of women and minorities were becoming more successful and joining country clubs.

"This will allow them to have full enjoyment of the facilities," he said.

"This will help prevent discrimination of women and minorities at large, quasi-public clubs which were established for business purposes as much as for social or recreational purposes."

Rep. Tim Greenwood,
R-Sylvania.

The bill allows clubs to continue to restrict the times when men or women use certain areas, as long as the restricted times are equal in quantity and quality.

● On March 9, police reported a squirrel was caught in a wire mesh a woman had placed on her bird feeder. The police said the squirrel's legs were woven through the mesh and had appeared to be there for a long time. Due to the squirrel's poor condition, it was taken to an animal hospital and euthanized.

● The police reported a 34-year-old man stole a SEGA Muhammadans Boxing Tape and a Muhammadans Boxing Book from a local grocery store on March 8. The man has also stolen video games after renting them from other Bowling Green, Perrysburg and Lake township stores.

● On March 8, police reported a man was shot in the head with a BB. After having X-rays, Wood County Hospital found the BB lodged under the

Seniors end career with lofty records

by Marty Fuller
News sports writer

The women's basketball team's 20-game win streak and successful season came to an end last night at the hands of the Creighton Lady Jays, 84-73.

Although their season ended with a disappointing NCAA loss, three members of the team will be logged in BG's record book for a long time to come.

The senior trio of Talita Scott, Lori Albers and Susie Cassell have given Falcon fans many memorable moments while tallying their way up the charts.

The most important statistics of last night's game — other than the final score — were Scott's 24 points and Albers' 18 markers.

By scoring 24 points in her final game as a Falcon, Scott moved into the second slot in BG's career scoring list with 1,432. Right behind Scott in the No. 3 spot is Albers with 1,424 points.

Albers, obviously frustrated with the defeat, down-played her accomplishment.

"I don't care where I am on the scoring list. They might as well say I'm last as far as I'm concerned," Albers said. "It's a team game. They're not going to remember I'm third on the scoring list. They're going to remember what we did as a team."

Although basketball is a team game, individuals make up a team and very talented individuals have produced an excellent year for the Falcons.

On top of her scoring feats, Scott ranks first in BG career field goal percentage, fourth in field goals made, fourth in free throws made, third in career steals and sixth in blocked shots.

Albers' accomplishments as a Falcon are just as noteworthy. She is the all-time BG leader in career steals, and ranks third in field goal percentage, third in converted free throws and rebound average and finally, fifth in career rebounds.

Backing up these two lethal weapons was Cassell, a senior guard.

At the point guard position, Cassell was the heart of the Falcon offense. She is the second-leading career assist leader at BG and ranks fifth on the all-time assist list in the Mid-American Conference.

When she wasn't dishing the rock she was drilling three-point bombs — 107 of them to be exact — which is good enough to claim the top spot on BG's register.

This Falcon season has been very prosperous, mainly due to the efforts of this senior trio.

watched BG charge ahead one final time, 62-60 on Susie Cassell's runner in the lane.

But Miller hit two more three-pointers, Jay center Jenny Olson converted a pair of free throws, and Creighton took a 68-62 lead with 2:39 left.

Creighton then nailed 11-of-12 free throws over the final two minutes, and the 10th-seeded Lady Jays advanced to a second-round matchup with Texas Tech this Saturday.

Clark said coming back from 13 down was a tribute to her team's determination.

"I think we made a good effort on coming back," she said. "We dug ourselves a hole early in the second half. Our kids really dug pretty deep to get back in the game."

On Miller's three-point attack, Clark said her squad "missed some assignments" and "wasn't in the spot we needed to be."

The game marked the final appearance of BG's five seniors (see sidebar) and they did not disappoint.

Scott scored a game-high 24 points and grabbed 12 rebounds in 37 minutes.

Cassell had nine points and five assists. Shade, a junior, added 13 points.

Albers, playing 36 minutes despite a bad cold and a sprained shooting hand, finished with 18 points, 13 rebounds (7 offensive), seven assists and two steals.

The 6-0 center, voice cracking after the game, said she was emotionally drained.

"It's really frustrating for me because I just feel I wasn't 100 percent," Albers said. "Every year something happens."

"As far as the team I think it's really frustrating for us, too, because we've lost two games like this in the NCAA's at home."

Scott kept the Falcons close early in the game. The 5-10 senior guard scored all 13 of her first-half points in the first 10 minutes of the contest.

Baseball wins season opener

by John Boyle
News sports writer

Brian Taylor's three-run home run keyed a six-run fourth-inning explosion as BG defeated Xavier 8-6 in the Falcon's season opener in Cincinnati Tuesday.

BG scored three more runs in the frame when senior designated hitter Rob Kallage blooped a bases-clearing single between Xavier's second baseman and right fielder. The single scored second baseman Mark Tamallo, center fielder Tony Gill and shortstop Mike Campbell and gave the Falcons a 7-2 lead through four innings.

The Musketeers rallied for two runs in the fifth, but could have gotten more if it weren't for Falcon reliever Jeff Dominique. Dominique entered the game with the bases full of Muskies and no outs. He struck out the first batter he faced and then induced the next Muskie batter to fly out to left field. Taylor then threw a strike to catcher Delker. "Jeff did an outstanding job -- he threw two solid innings for us," Falcon head coach Danny Schmitz said.

Senior reliever and team co-captain Brad Mast then closed the door in the ninth. Mast struck out Xavier's final batter to capture BG's first win.

Although it was important for BG to win the game, the Falcons also accomplished much more, Schmitz said.

"We took eight pitchers down there and had a chance to get them all in a game and out on a dirt mound and hopefully broke the ice," he said. "We hit three home runs Tuesday -- which was great -- and played pretty solid defense."

BG's other two home runs came off the bat of Combs and Delker. Tamallo was also 3-3 with three singles.

Sophomore Jason Tippie (1-0) pitched a scoreless and hitless third inning to gain the win. Mast earned his first save of the season.

BG now heads south to Ft. Meyers, Fla. for their spring trip. The Falcons will play three Big Ten squads -- Indiana, Northwestern and 26th-ranked Ohio State -- among others.

Reflections on a great one

by Andy Dugan
News sports writer

Senior Josie McCulloch is in Indianapolis right now, partaking in the last swim meet of her college career. It's the NCAA Championships. She's swimming her favorite events, the 100 and 200 Breaststroke, between today and Friday and she's gonna swim FAST!

McCulloch is the only swimmer in the Mid-American Conference -- for both men and women -- to ever qualify for the National Championships four years in a row. Some of her accomplishments in the sport of swimming will never be outdone. Ever.

Being both a senior and a swimmer, I have had the honor of seeing Josie blaze her trail of victories and records throughout her collegiate career. And what a blaze it's been, from the very start.

Freshman year, I remember she broke the conference record in the 200 breast...at practice. It was at the beginning of the year, before the meet season even started. If that wasn't impressive enough, you should have seen her when she really got in shape! WOW!

At the Mid-American Conference meet that year, she shattered pool and conference records. I remember seeing our coach, Brian Gordon, jumping up and down across the pool deck, overjoyed after seeing how fast she had gone. I've never seen anyone make our coach do that before. She was that incredible.

I also recall my teammate Kevin Grotke talk about what it was like to practice with Josie. As a freshman, Grotke -- who won the 100 and 200 breaststroke events at this year's MAC meet -- did everything he could at practices and meets just to beat her. He told me that one of his goals that year was to swim faster than her at each meet. When he did, it wasn't by much. That's how good she is!

Yes, Josie won the two breaststroke events at the conference meet that freshman year, as well as her sophomore and junior year. Senior year was different though -- shockingly different.

The competition was getting closer to her as her fourth season rolled on, so close that someone was able to nip the champ. Josie lost the 100 breast at this year's conference meet by less than a fifth of a second.

She went 1:04.1. If she would have gone what she went that morning to qualify -- a pool record 1:03.70 -- she would have won again. But that's one tall order when you have to go that fast.

Can you imagine what it must be like for her? Being the best, the winner, the champ.

We all see ourselves there in our dreams, but Josie has to live it. And it hasn't been all fun and games.

All that pressure and all the expectations from teammates, coaches, friends, family and most importantly herself. It's got to be harder than hell, but she's always come through, outperforming the field.

I mean look at this: here's a woman who swims the slowest of the four official strokes in competitive swimming, and she still can cover four laps of the pool in 63 seconds. How many people can say they can do that swimming any way they can. Not a whole lot, I can tell you that. She's a gem, that Josie McCulloch.

And so the time has come for Josie to once again step up on the blocks and race the best. No matter what happens, the fact that she is there speaks for it self.

She's the best.

Harding quits, pleads guilty to conspiracy

The Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. -- Tonya Harding headed for court Wednesday and NBC News reported she had struck a plea bargain with authorities and resigned from the U.S. Figure Skating Association.

Tonya Harding pleaded guilty Wednesday to conspiracy to hinder prosecution in the attack on Olympic figure skater Nancy Kerrigan. She was fined $100,000 and agreed to three years' supervised probation.

Harding also will donate $50,000 to the Special Olympics and pay $10,000 in court costs to Multnomah County.

The U.S. national figure skating champion also agreed to undergo a psychiatric examination and accept watever treatment is recommended.

Harding also resigned from the U.S. Figure Skating Association, ending her amateur career.

Harding pleaded guilty to one count of conspiring to hinder prosecution in the Jan. 6 attack. Kerrigan was struck in the knee, forcing her to withdraw from the U.S. Figure Skating Championships in Detroit. Harding then won the championship and qualified for the Olympics.

Nicole Bobek, the next alternate, will take Harding's place on the U.S. team in Japan.

If Harding is not a member of the USFSA, she can not compete in the World Figure Skating Championships next week in Japan. She was to leave for Japan Thursday.

Under a plea agreement with prosecutors, Harding will face no jail time. She will perform 500 hours of community service.

In return, there will be no further prosecution of Harding by any jurisdiction.

Harding entered the plea at a hearing before Donald Londer, presiding judge in Multnomah County Circuit Court, who was called in from his vacation.

"I really sorry if I interfered," Harding told Londer after he accepted her plea.

Kansas City batters Indians

The Associated Press

HAINES CITY, Fla. -- Rookie Shane Halter hit a grand slam in the eighth inning, and Greg Gagne was 3 for 3 with two runs scored as the Kansas City Royals beat the Cleveland Indians 8-2 Wednesday.

The Royals loaded the bases with nobody out on singles by Wally Joyner and Les Norman, and a walk to Steve Balboni. Indians reliever Jeremy Hernandez then struck out Brent Mayne and Joe Randa before Halter's homer to right field.

Gagne raised his average to .464, while hitting safely for the eighth time in 10 spring games.

Royals starter Kevin Appier held the Indians to one hit in five shutout innings. The Indians managed but four hits off Appier; Jeff Montgomery, who picked up the victory; and Mark Gubicza, who worked two perfect innings for his first save.

Indians starter Jack Morris allowed two runs, one unearned.
